

Catch up: the Obamas slam Trump; Blinken in Qatar for ceasefire talks

Barack Obama said America was “ready for a new chapter” with Kamala Harris as president, as he delivered Tuesday’s keynote speech at the Democratic National Convention. The former president also criticised Donald Trump’s use of “childish nicknames and crazy conspiracy theories” and his “weird obsession with crowd size”. Earlier Michelle Obama, the former first lady, addressed the convention and described Ms Harris as “one of the most qualified people” ever to run for president.

Antony Blinken, America’s secretary of state, visited Qatar for talks about a ceasefire in Gaza and spoke with the country’s prime minister. Earlier Mr Blinken met Abdel Fattah al-Sisi, Egypt’s president. The two Middle Eastern countries talk directly to Hamas, which has yet to agree to a “bridging proposal”—which would lead to a ceasefire and the return of Israeli hostages—that Mr Blinken said Israel had accepted.

China hit back against the EU’s tariffs on its electric-car exports with a probe into some European dairy imports. On Tuesday the European Commission said that Tesla cars would face lower levies than other Chinese-made EVs. China has used anti-dumping investigations into European agricultural products, most recently pork, as a tit-for-tat response in the escalating trade war.

Britain's government vowed to send more failed asylum-seekers back home as the country struggles to cut illegal migration. Yvette Cooper, the home secretary, pledged a “better-controlled” system. Her ministry plans a “large surge in enforcement and returns flights”. It will hire 100 new intelligence officers to target smuggling gangs and reopen immigration removal centres.

A federal judge in America blocked a ban on firms insisting that their employees sign non-compete agreements. Judge Ada Brown said that the Federal Trade Commission, the regulator that wanted to introduce the rule, lacked the authority to do so. A fifth of American workers have a non-compete clause in their contract, barring them from leaving to join a rival. The FTC said it was “seriously considering” an appeal.

The share price of Trump Media—the parent company of Truth Social, a social-media site—hit an all-time low for a second consecutive day. In August the firm reported a $16.4m quarterly loss, and its market value has nearly halved since it started trading in March. Donald Trump, who owns about 60% of it, will be allowed to liquidate his holdings in September.

Ukraine's parliament passed a law that paves the way to banning the Russia-affiliated Ukrainian Orthodox Church. The UOC, which was the Ukrainian branch of the Russian Orthodox Church under the Soviet Union, formally broke with the Moscow patriarchate in May 2022. But Ukrainian security services accuse the UOC of spreading Russian propaganda and housing spies. Volodymyr Zelensky, Ukraine's president, is expected to sign the law.

Figure of the day: 4.8%, the share of American companies that use artificial intelligence to produce goods and services. Read the full story.

As Democrats gather in Chicago for their national convention this week, keep abreast of America's political news by reading The US in brief, our daily update. Sign up to receive it as a newsletter each weekday.

Modi's redemption tour

Narendra Modi, India's prime minister, arrives in Poland on Wednesday for a two-day visit. On Friday he will travel on to Ukraine to meet President Volodymyr Zelensky. The visit to Poland will mainly focus on economic co-operation: the country is India's largest trading partner in central and eastern Europe. Yet it is the visit to Ukraine, the first by a sitting Indian prime minister, that will be watched closely by most observers.

The trip comes six weeks after Mr Modi travelled to Russia, where he was pictured hugging President Vladimir Putin on the same day as a Russian strike on Kyiv, Ukraine's capital, hit a children's hospital. Mr Modi implicitly rebuked Mr Putin for the attack the next day, but the juxtaposition still prompted outrage. Speculation that Mr Modi's visit to Kyiv is a sign that India is preparing to mediate in Russia's war in Ukraine is probably misplaced. His first job will be to mend fences.

Scholz heads to Moldova

In some respects Moldovans have it rough. The landlocked former Soviet republic is one of Europe's poorest countries and has high levels of corruption. Transnistria, in the east, is a pro-Russian separatist enclave that is exploited by smugglers. Russia's invasion of neighbouring Ukraine stirred fears that Moldova could be dragged into war.

In response Moldova has intensified efforts to huddle up to western Europe. It has found a powerful backer in Germany, whose chancellor, Olaf Scholz, visits on Wednesday. In 2022 Germany initiated the Moldova Support Platform to boost the economy. It has also backed Moldova's bid to join the European Union. Germany's interest is partly economic: German companies have invested heavily in the country's car-parts industry. Mr Scholz is expected to discuss Moldova's security and EU hopes when he meets Maia Sandu, the pro-Western president, who faces a tricky election in the autumn.

A monetary sigh of relief in Jakarta

On Wednesday Bank Indonesia, the central bank for South-East Asia's largest economy, made its latest interest-rate decision. As expected, it held its benchmark rate at 6.25%. But falling inflation and a weaker dollar may soon give rate-setters the opportunity to loosen monetary policy. The prospect that America's Federal Reserve could soon begin cutting rates has reduced pressure on the Indonesian currency. The greenback has weakened against the rupiah during August, dropping around 5%.

Indonesia's central bankers, like those in other emerging markets, are breathing a sigh of relief. But a longer-term problem looms. Prabowo Subianto, the country's president-elect, will take office in October. His intention to raise government borrowing may weaken the international appeal of the Indonesian currency. That will test the country's central bankers, and may force them to keep interest rates at higher levels even as the Fed begins to cut.

Xiaomi's mark on the EV market

Xiaomi, a Chinese tech group, made its name selling sleek but ultra-cheap smartphones in the early 2010s. The company gained a reputation as an Apple imitator; its boss, Lei Jun, was often accused of aping the paired-down sartorial style of Apple's founder, Steve Jobs. More than a decade later Xiaomi appears to have bested Apple's attempts to become an electric car maker. The American giant has abandoned its EV project while the Chinese firm, which first put its cars on the market in March, may sell up to 120,000 by the end of the year.

Investors got an update on Xiaomi's progress on Wednesday when it reported second-quarter earnings. The group has been applying the same sleek-but-cheap strategy to EVs as it did to phones: the price of its SU7 model starts at around $30,000. The plan seems to be working. It delivered 27,307 SU7s in the second quarter, and expects to achieve its goal of delivering 100,000 EVs this year by November.

The woes of Test cricket

Sri Lanka's cricketers begin a three-Test series against England in Manchester on Wednesday. England has already hosted the West Indies this summer, winning all three matches. They will probably dominate against Sri Lanka, too. It is tough for teams other than India, Australia and England to remain competitive in Test cricket. Many of Sri Lanka's best players, including Wanindu Hasaranga and Charith Asalanka, both all-rounders, are concentrating on the more lucrative Twenty20 circuit, a much shorter format of the game.

Sri Lanka's squad managed to squeeze in just a single warm-up game for the series (losing heavily to England's second team). That has given them little chance to adapt to unfamiliar conditions. In fact, the team has not won a Test outside of Asia since they beat a callow Zimbabwe side in early 2020. A heavy defeat to England would do little to boost the popularity of Test matches in Sri Lanka—or the broader reputation of the format as a compelling spectacle.

Daily quiz

The Economist

We will serve you a new question each day this week. On Friday your challenge is to give us all five answers and, as important, tell us the connecting theme. Email your responses (and include mention of your home city and country) by 1700 BST on Friday to QuizEspresso@economist.com. We'll pick randomly from those with the right answers and crown three winners on Saturday.

Wednesday: The barbule, calamus and rachis are all elements of which animal body part?

Tuesday: Which horror film from 1986 was advertised with the tagline "Be Afraid. Be Very Afraid"?

4.8%

The share of American companies that use artificial intelligence to produce goods and services.

Read the full story.

Beauty is that to what the human mind responds at its deepest and most profound.

Subrahmanyan Chandrasekhar