

The world in brief

Catch up quickly on the global stories that matter

Russia launched one of its biggest drone attacks on Ukraine so far, the Ukrainian air force said. Russia fired some 275 drones at the region around Kyiv, Ukraine's capital, as well as at Dnipropetrovsk and Donetsk in the east. The strikes killed one person and wounded several others. Earlier Donald Trump said he would call his Russian counterpart, Vladimir Putin, on Monday in an effort to end the "bloodbath".

Ceasefire talks between Israel and Hamas resumed in Qatar as the Israeli army pounded Gaza. The bombing killed at least 58 people overnight, bringing the death toll to more than 300 since Thursday. Israel began mobilising more troops. Hamas's negotiators said that the new round of indirect talks was "without pre-conditions".

Pope Leo XIV began his inaugural mass in St Peter's Square, an event that officially starts his papacy. Before the service Leo greeted the large crowds at the Vatican; world leaders, including Ukraine's president, Volodymyr Zelensky, and America's vice-president, J.D. Vance, are in attendance. Leo is the first American pope.

Two people died and at least 19 were injured when a Mexican navy tall ship crashed into Brooklyn Bridge in New York. Some of the ship's masts snapped, falling onto deck. Officials said a mechanical problem on the ARM Cuauhtémoc was probably to blame. The busy bridge has since reopened.

Taiwan safely shut its last nuclear reactor, which had generated 3% of its electricity. But the island's government is debating bringing atomic power back because it fears that China might disrupt its power supply, which is mostly imported. Blackouts have plagued the country. This week lawmakers revised legislation that could pave the way to switch the reactors back on.

Mr Trump told Walmart, the world's largest retailer, to “EAT THE TARIFFS”. This was his response to Walmart’s announcement that it would soon raise prices to cope with the global levies imposed by the Trump administration. Walmart’s boss had called the tariffs “too high” and warned that it would need to protect its small profit margins. The president retorted that the retailer made “billions of dollars” last year.

Austria won Eurovision, a gaudy continental song contest that took place in Switzerland this year. “Wasted Love”, sung by JJ, had been behind Israel’s entry until the final vote of the evening. Staff thwarted protestors who tried to disrupt the performance of Israel’s song by Yuval Raphael, a survivor of the Hamas attacks of October 7th 2023.

Word of the week: amphidromia, an ancient Greek ceremony during which the father decided whether to keep a baby, or abandon it on a hillside. It’s better being a dad now. Read the full story.

Photograph: AP

Israel's precarious economy

On Sunday Israel will release GDP data, expected to show that the economy grew at an annualised rate of 2.1% in the first three months of 2025. This is strong compared with most rich countries. It is also an improvement on 2024, when the economy grew by a sluggish 1%.

However, optimism should be guarded. Israelis have one of the highest birth-rates in the developed world. When adjusted to population growth—which in 2024 was 1.4%—the economy is hardly growing. The war has brought short-term boosts due to a sharp rise in government expenditure and a drop in unemployment, as young people are called up to reserve duty. But in the long term, these things will be bad for Israel's economy. There is a cost to splurging on weapons and paying reservists to fight instead of working in the most productive sectors. With prospects for a ceasefire in Gaza still unclear, Israel is far from economic recovery.

Photograph: Getty Images

A real choice in Poland

Law and Justice was booted out of power in Poland in 2023, but it has kept a foothold in the presidential palace. That has allowed the national-conservative party to frustrate the new government's liberal agenda by blocking some two dozen of its laws and obstructing the appointment of judges and ambassadors. The impasse could soon end. Poles vote in the first round of a presidential election on Sunday.

Leading the polls is Rafal Trzaskowski, Warsaw's mayor, backed by the ruling Civic Coalition (KO). He has promised to approve government reforms of courts and public media—though progress on these has also been delayed by squabbles within KO's unwieldy alliance. Trailing him by around six percentage points is the continuity candidate of the populist right, Karol Nawrocki. A gaggle of eleven follows. In such a crowded field, neither Mr Trzaskowski nor Mr Nawrocki is likely to gain the majority of votes needed for an outright victory. They will probably face one another in a run-off on June 1st.

Photograph: Getty Images

Portugal votes, again

On Sunday the Portuguese will vote for a government for the third time in a little over three years. The election came about when Luís Montenegro, the centre-right prime minister for the past year, lost a confidence motion in parliament. His family's consulting firm had received a monthly fee from a company seeking to renew a government concession to run some casinos.

Polls suggest voters are not much bothered by that scandal and that his coalition may win more than the 29% of votes it scraped last year. Portuguese will pay close attention to whether or not Chega ("Enough!"), a hard-right outfit, improves on its 18%. Mr Montenegro rules out a coalition with them and may again have to depend on the opposition Socialists.

While the country has enjoyed healthy economic growth, many Portuguese are angry about a housing shortage and a creaking health service. To fix them, they need a stronger and more durable government.

All rather tricky

Portugal, general-election voting intention, %

Source: National polls

*Includes CDS

Photograph: Reuters

The work begins for Pope Leo

Pope Leo XIV is due in St Peter's square on Sunday for a mass celebrating the formal start of his papacy. It also closes the cycles of ceremony that began with the death of his predecessor, Francis, on Easter Monday.

But the new pope has already started working. One of his first meetings, on Wednesday, was with Cardinal Seán O'Malley, head of the Vatican commission responsible for tackling clerical sex abuse. It raised hopes that Leo will be more effective in his approach than his predecessor, although his own previous handling of cases involving alleged offenders has been criticised.

Leo is expected to soon make his first trip abroad as pope, to Turkey, to mark the 1,700th anniversary of the Council of Nicaea, a milestone in the definition of Christian doctrine. While there, he may also meet the leader of the Eastern Orthodox church, Patriarch Bartholomew.

Illustration: The Economist

This week's crossword

We now publish an interactive edition of our crossword twice a week, allowing you to enter and check the answers, and see explanations, instantly. Try it here. Or, if you prefer to do things the old-fashioned way, use the grid below.

Our crossword has two sets of clues, one for seasoned cruciverbalists and the other for less experienced solvers. Both give the same answers, all of which feature in articles in this week's edition of The Economist:

Cryptic clues

1 down Fair or incorrect? Crime without limit, only this moves Donald Trump (3,5,3)

1 across In part to outflank a rascal, Zelensky headed here (6)

2 across Far out! Before a beer, Pakistan soldiers claimed they downed this (6)

3 across A dedication to European science, perhaps (6)

Factual clues

1 down Presidential plane at the centre of a corruption storm (3,5,3)
1 across The city in which Volodymyr Zelensky met Recep Tayyip Erdogan this week (6)
2 across French-made warplane that Pakistan claims to have shot down (6)
3 across A tribute to someone who died (6)

Email all four answers, along with your home city and country, by 9am GMT on Monday to [\[email protected\]](#). We will pick randomly from those with the right answers and crown three winners in next week's edition.

Image: The Economist

Illustration: The Economist

The winners of this week's quiz

Thank you to everyone who took part in this week's quiz. The winners, chosen at random, were:

Jaci Noel, Phoenix, Arizona, United States

Hélène Tremblay, Gatineau, Canada

Carlos Sangil, Madrid, Spain

They all gave the correct answers of Bonnie Prince Charlie, Giant, Fox News, a peach and Waltzing Matilda. The theme is books by Roald Dahl: Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, the BFG (Big Friendly Giant), Fantastic Mr Fox, James and the Giant Peach and Matilda.

The questions were:

Monday: What popular nickname was attached to the member of the Stuart family who led the Jacobite rebellion in Britain in 1745?

Tuesday: What was the last film made by James Dean before he was killed in a car crash?

Wednesday: Roger Ailes was the long-term head of which cable news network?

Thursday: The state of Georgia has a nickname associated with which fruit?

Friday: Which traditional Australian song begins with the line “Once a jolly swagman camped by a billabong”?

Although this may seem a paradox, all exact science is dominated by the idea of approximation.

Bertrand Russell