

Catch up: Vance accepts VP nomination; Bangladesh rocked by protests

J.D. Vance formally accepted the Republican nomination for vice-president. At the Republican National Convention in Milwaukee, Donald Trump's running-mate gave a confident and impassioned speech, stressing his "working-class" upbringing and promising to be "a vice-president who never forgets where he came from". Mr Vance also bashed President Joe Biden's immigration policies, attacked China and promised to stop "catering to Wall Street". He repeatedly appealed to battleground states: Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. Mr Trump looked pleased with his heir apparent throughout.

At least 16 people were killed in Bangladesh as unrest rocked the country. In Dhaka, the capital, protesters set fire to the headquarters of the state-run television network. Authorities cut access to some internet services. Protestors are demanding an end to a controversial quota policy that reserves 30% of government jobs for the families of veterans who fought in the country's war of independence in 1971.

To Lam, Vietnam's president, took over as the Communist Party's caretaker leader. The 80-year-old party chief, Nguyen Phu Trong, has been suffering from poor health. Mr Lam previously served as Vietnam's top security official and led a sweeping crackdown on corruption. His appointment cements his position as the likeliest successor to Mr Trong when his term as party chief formally ends in 2026.

Blackstone, the world's biggest private-equity firm, said that its distributable earnings rose by 3% year on year in the second quarter of 2024. The company's real-estate business failed to overcome a slump that has persisted due to high interest rates, though its losses were offset by increased earnings elsewhere, especially from its credit arm. Blackstone also said it had increased its investments in anticipation that the Federal Reserve would cut interest rates later this year.

Anglo American, a multinational mining conglomerate, said that its diamond-mining division, De Beers, would curtail production. De Beers previously implemented production cuts of 10%, which caused sales to fall from 6.9m carats in the first quarter to 6.4m carats in the second quarter of this year. Falling demand from consumers in countries such as China, which was previously an important market, has forced the diamond industry into a steep downturn.

Sergei Ryabkov, one of Russia's deputy foreign ministers, said that his country would not rule out deploying nuclear weapons in response to America's plans to station long-range missiles in Germany from 2026. Mr Ryabkov said that defending Kaliningrad, a Russian exclave, was a particular concern. Last month Vladimir Putin announced that the country would resume developing short and intermediate-range missiles, having previously paused the programme.

Investigators in Australia seized a collection of more than 3,000 bird eggs believed to be worth as much as A$500,000 ($337,000). Some of the eggs, which had been hollowed out, are thought to belong to rare species that are native only to Australia. A 62-year-old man is alleged to have harvested the eggs and may face charges under an environmental protection law.

Figure of the day: 4.5%, the amount that China's house prices fell in June compared with a year earlier—the steepest drop for nine years. Read the full story.

In the run-up to America's presidential election, we've launched The US in brief—a daily update to help you keep on top of the political stories that matter. Sign up here to receive it as a newsletter, each weekday, in your inbox.

Can TSMC join the trillionaires' club?

TSMC, Taiwan's semiconductor giant, reported on Thursday that second-quarter profits rose by 36% to T$247.8bn ($7.6bn), beating expectations. It is one of the world's biggest beneficiaries of the boom in generative artificial intelligence. Excitement over its role in producing AI chips for big tech firms, like Nvidia and Apple, recently made it the first Asian company to come close to a valuation of $1trn on American stockmarkets. Strong bottom-line growth, more bargaining power and the possibility of higher spending to build new foundries for cutting-edge chips could propel it higher.

Although TSMC will probably hit $1trn eventually, geopolitics could prove a problem. In an interview published this week by Bloomberg, Donald Trump sounded half-hearted about defending Taiwan from Chinese aggression. Shares in TSMC fell by more than 2%. Moreover, a strong earnings report on Wednesday from ASML, which sells extreme ultraviolet lithography equipment to TSMC, was overshadowed by news that the Biden administration may impose further curbs on the Dutch firm's business in China.

Von der Leyen's pitch for a second term

Having recently been picked by the European Union's 27 national leaders to keep leading its powerful executive arm, Ursula von der Leyen on Thursday convinced the European Parliament to back her in order to secure the job. The German secured 401 votes in the 720-strong chamber—well above the 361 she needed—to ensure a second five-year term as head of the European Commission in Brussels.

The vote was technically a formality. The coalition of mainstream parties that backs Ms von der Leyen, including her centre-right European People's Party, the Socialist bloc and liberals, control over 400 seats. But the ballot is secret and some had worried that centrists might balk at supporting Ms von der Leyen. But in the end, her pitch to MEPs meeting in Strasbourg was strong. She argued that failure to back her would land the EU in an institutional crisis in the midst of war in Ukraine and the prospect of Trumpism rebooted.

France's messy new parliament

The 577 members of France's lower house of parliament sit for the first time on Thursday, following the country's final legislative vote on July 7th. The National Assembly will elect a new president, and deputies choose their official political groups. This will reveal the exact balance of power between the three main blocs: a left-wing alliance (the New Popular Front), centrists and Marine Le Pen's hard right.

France, however, does not yet have a new government. On Tuesday Gabriel Attal, the outgoing prime minister, formally resigned. But Emmanuel Macron, the president, has kept him on as caretaker. No bloc is close to having a parliamentary majority. The four-party NFP has failed to agree on a single candidate for prime minister. Even if it does, it is not clear that it could run a stable government. Mr Macron, meanwhile, hopes that a coalition could be formed around his centrists. Even as the country gears up to host the Olympics, political uncertainty prevails.

The ECB's inflation dilemma

Inflation in the euro zone is edging downwards towards the European Central Bank's target of 2%. In June the annual inflation rate fell to 2.5%, from 2.6% in the previous month. Core inflation—which strips out volatile prices for energy and food—remained at 2.9%. Some worry that euro-zone inflation has been stuck at about the same level since February. As a result, the ECB remained cautious and decided to leave rates on hold.

The bank started lowering rates by 0.25 percentage points in June. But this time the ECB's top brass decided to wait for more data. Markets expect just 0.4 percentage-points-worth of further cuts by the end of this year. Services inflation, at 4.1%, is still too high. Wage growth, according to data from Indeed, a hiring website, has recently picked up again in Europe. For Europe's economic recovery, that is bad news.

Golf's steely gentleman

Scottie Scheffler is having a great season. The American golfer has already won the Masters in Augusta, the Players Championship and four of the PGA Tour's eight signature events. (No one else has won more than one.) Mr Scheffler is the favourite to take the Open in Royal Troon, Scotland, which began on Thursday.

His statistics demonstrate his superiority. Of the PGA Tour's 177 players, he takes the fewest shots per round, and makes the most birdies (completing a hole in one under par). Only his putting could be improved, as it is merely a little better than the average of the world's best players.

Mr Scheffler has an even temperament, and a strong religious faith. After he was arrested by traffic police on his way to the PGA Championship in May, he was able to keep his focus and finish in the top ten. (Charges against him were later dropped.) His calm demeanour makes him a formidable opponent.

Daily quiz

The Economist

We will serve you a new question each day this week. On Friday your challenge is to give us all five answers and, as important, tell us the connecting theme. Email your responses (and include mention of your home city and country) by 1700 GMT on Friday to QuizEspresso@economist.com. We'll pick randomly from those with the right answers and crown three winners on Saturday.

Thursday: The 2,000 guineas, 1,000 guineas, the Oaks, the Derby and the St Leger Stakes are given what title in the English horse racing calendar?

Wednesday: Which bean, often used for flavouring, is best known for its Madagascar variety?

80%

The increase in the nominal market value of America's S&P 500 index of stocks since the start of 2020

Read the full story

The person, be it gentleman or lady, who has not pleasure in a good novel, must be intolerably stupid.

Jane Austen