

Catch up: Israel kills Hizbullah's leader; Iranians charged for hacking Trump campaign

Hizbullah confirmed that Israel had killed Hassan Nasrallah, the militant group's leader, in an air strike targeting its headquarters in Beirut on Friday. Iranian state media said that a general in the country's elite Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps had also died. More than 300 people, including several other senior figures in Hizbullah's military command, are believed to have been killed in the attack. Meanwhile Israel continued its campaign of air strikes on Hizbullah positions in Lebanon's capital and the south and east of the country.

America's Justice Department indicted three Iranian nationals for allegedly hacking into Donald Trump's campaign. Prosecutors say they stole campaign documents and emails and leaked them to the press in order to undermine Mr Trump's presidential bid, "stoke discord and erode confidence" in America's elections. Iran has long been seeking retaliation for the Trump-ordered assassination of Qassem Suleimani, an Iranian commander, in 2020.

South African police began searching for the perpetrators of two mass shootings that killed 17 people in Lusikisiki, a town in the country's east. Investigators have not determined a motive for the attacks, on two homes in the same street. Mass shootings have become increasingly common in South Africa, which has one of the highest murder rates in the world.

Around eight people were killed and 11 wounded after Russian air strikes hit a hospital in Sumy, a city in north-eastern Ukraine, according to Ukrainian officials. Russian attacks on Sumy have become more frequent since Ukraine began an offensive in Kursk, a region in western Russia, in August. Earlier Ukraine's air force said it had shot down 69 drones and two missiles launched by Russia during the night.

Sky sued Warner Bros Discovery, a streaming service, accusing it of violating an agreement that gives it the right to co-produce shows. The broadcaster wants to co-produce a television adaptation of J.K. Rowling's "Harry Potter" series expected to air in 2026. It estimated revenue lost from not taking part would reach at least hundreds of millions of dollars.

At least 35 people were killed in America by Hurricane Helene as it swept through Florida, Georgia and North and South Carolina. The category 4 hurricane made landfall in Big Bend, Florida, as one of the strongest on record. On Friday more than 4m homes and businesses lost power across several states; millions of people were placed under flood warnings.

Three parties at last formed a government in Flanders, in northern Belgium, nearly four months after voters went to the polls. The centre-left Vooruit, the Christian Democrats and the right-wing N-VA had struggled to agree on matters including the budget, mandatory voting and restrictions on wearing headscarves. One senior N-VA politician congratulated the parties on finding "a creative way" of putting aside their differences.

Word of the week: R-star, the term that economists use to describe the “neutral real rate” of interest, which applies when the economy is growing at its exact potential. . Read the full story.

Venezuela's opposition rallies supporters

Two months have passed since Venezuela's presidential election, in which Nicolás Maduro claimed victory, despite clear evidence that he was routed. On Saturday Venezuelans around the world are being asked to mark the day. The opposition, which has published receipts from voting machines confirming its victory, is calling on supporters to read out the results as an act of defiance.

Inside Venezuela, turnout at demonstrations will probably be modest. Mr Maduro's regime has arrested thousands since protests broke out following the vote. It is not clear if María Corina Machado, the opposition leader, who is in hiding, will risk an appearance. The actual president-elect, Edmundo González, fled the country this month for Spain. While authoritarian allies such as China and Russia have congratulated Mr Maduro, democracies, such as neighbours Brazil and Colombia, have said that they will not recognise his presidency without evidence of his supposed victory. The chances of seeing it before Mr Maduro's inauguration in January are slim.

Remembering Hong Kong's civil society

In March 2021 Vincent Lam learned that he could be arrested. He had helped to run the Civil Human Rights Front, a group of NGOs that had organised Hong Kong's largest pro-democracy rallies and was being investigated by the police. He fled to Britain.

Denied suffrage by Britain and then China, Hong Kongers had long expressed dissent by marching. Unions and political parties held demonstrations for labour rights or social causes, as well as for democracy. Participation was legal. But violent protests in 2019 against China's tightening grip exhausted the Chinese government's patience. In 2020 a national-security law banned all dissent. Dozens of Mr Lam's peers are now in prison.

This weekend Mr Lam is exhibiting protest memorabilia in west London at a show titled "Behind the Struggle: Hong Kong Civil Society". He hopes to remind exiled Hong Kongers, including activists like him who might never return home, of their proud tradition of resistance—and educate others.

SNL turns 50

Not many television shows stay on the airwaves for 50 years; those that do tend to be game shows, news bulletins or soap operas. But “Saturday Night Live” is almost there. The sketch-comedy show kicks off its 50th season on (when else?) Saturday. The 969th episode will be hosted by Jean Smart, who recently collected the Emmy for Best Comedy Actress for her acerbic turn on “Hacks”. JellyRoll, a hip-hop star, will provide the musical performances.

Befitting the show’s status as a cultural institution, a film has been released this week to coincide with the milestone. “Saturday Night” dramatises the run-up to the first broadcast in October 1975. A crop of young performers portrays the cast and crew, including Gabriel LaBelle as Lorne Michaels, who produces the show to this day. Rumours abound that he will use the anniversary to announce he is handing over the baton. Finding the right steward for this mainstay of American entertainment will be a serious business.

The world's greatest rugby team

New Zealand and South Africa are the dominant forces in men's rugby. Between them they have won the past five World Cups, with South Africa's Springboks taking their second consecutive title in 2023. Meanwhile the All Blacks have won the past three Rugby Championships, an annual tournament that includes South Africa, as well as Australia and Argentina.

The duopoly will probably continue when this year's championship comes to an end on Saturday. The Springboks will lift the trophy if they beat Argentina in Mbombela, in South Africa. Yet Los Pumas have proven themselves obstinate opponents. They won the reverse fixture last week, holding off South Africa by a single point. That gives the Argentines a slim chance of claiming the overall title should they beat the Springboks by a wide margin this time around. Such a victory could signal the rise of a new rugby superpower.

Profile: Hassan Nasrallah, leader of Hizbullah

In the beginning he was never alone. Living with eight siblings in East Beirut, it was hard to find silence. Yet he always searched for solace, travelling to neighbouring areas to find religious books to read. In them he found God and the teachings of Shia Islamists. And Israeli attacks on Lebanon were common. All this would shape Hassan Nasrallah, the leader of Hizbullah and a sworn enemy of Israel, to the end. On September 28th, the day after Israel struck what it said was the militant group's "central headquarters" in Beirut, the militia that he led for more than 30 years confirmed that he was dead.

Born in 1960, Mr Nasrallah claimed to have been an observant Muslim from the age of nine; he admired the teachings of Musa al-Sadr, the founder of Amal, a Shia political party. When civil war broke out in 1975, Mr Nasrallah joined Amal and at just 15 was given responsibility for organising members in his village. A year later he left for a seminary in Najaf, in Iraq, where he met Abbas Musawi, a cleric.

They returned to Lebanon in 1978. Mr Nasrallah helped run “awareness-raising” seminars and lectures for Amal. But when Israel invaded Lebanon in 1982—which left thousands dead—he left the movement, which he felt was “no longer up to the task” of resisting Israel.

He joined the paramilitary group, co-founded by Musawi, that would become Hizbullah. In 1983 its bombs killed hundreds of American and French soldiers, and it soon became a coherent organisation determined to fight Israel and Western powers in Lebanon. After Musawi was killed by an Israeli strike in 1992, Mr Nasrallah succeeded him as its leader. He blamed Israel for the “blood-soaked carnage” and its “protector” America.

Mr Nasrallah presided over the party when it won eight seats in parliamentary elections in 1992 for the first time—and over its political growth since. Today the pro-Hizbullah bloc has 62 of the 128 seats in Lebanon’s parliament. He also ruled over the expansion of its military arsenal, with continued help from its sponsor, Iran.

In 2006 Hizbullah went to war with Israel in support of Hamas. After pushing the Israeli army to a standstill, Mr Nasrallah claimed a “strategic, historic victory”. His speech was lapped up across the Middle East. After the assassination in 2020 of Qassem Suleimani, an Iranian general co-ordinating foreign militias, Mr Nasrallah increasingly appeared as his own man.

Since Hamas’s attack on Israel on October 7th, Mr Nasrallah tried to avoid all-out war with Israel. But things slid out of his control. On September 17th the pagers of thousands of Hizbullah’s members exploded; the next day walkie-talkies blew up. At least 37 people were killed. Mr Nasrallah vowed “a reckoning”. Hizbullah fired more than 100 projectiles towards Israel; subsequent Israeli strikes on Lebanon killed more than 700. On September 26th Israel said it was preparing to put boots on the ground in Lebanon. The next day Israeli missiles struck residential buildings in Beirut; Israel insists that Hizbullah's headquarters were beneath the buildings. Mr Nasrallah was among the hundreds of dead.

Weekly crossword

Our crossword has two sets of clues, one for seasoned cruciverbalists and the other for less experienced solvers. Both give the same answers, all of which feature in articles in this week's edition of The Economist:

Cryptic clues

- 1 down* Infection? Pin, pad, ice, it's cured! (12)
- 1 across* Sadly, Kamala loses centreground here (6)
- 2 across* Name a big central city (5)
- 3 across* Instrument on unknown state (6)

Factual clues

- 1 down* Painful inflammation in the abdomen (12)
- 1 across* Russia and China have flown patrols near this state (6)
- 2 across* Home of the world's tallest building (5)
- 3 across* German region that held state elections this month (6)

Email all four answers, along with your home city and country, by 9am GMT on Monday to crossword@economist.com. We will pick randomly from those with the right answers and crown three winners in next week's edition.

The winners of this week's quiz

The Economist

Thank you to everyone who took part in this week's quiz. The winners, chosen at random, were:

Catherine Mullin, Boston, Massachusetts, America

Nigel Watson, Edinburgh, Britain

Klaus Hereth, Munich, Germany

They all gave the correct answers of: suffragettes, Mars, Rebel Wilson, The Ashes and bone china. The theme is David Bowie songs: Suffragette City, Life on Mars?, Rebel Rebel, Ashes to Ashes and China Girl.

The questions were:

Monday: Emmeline and Christabel Pankhurst were members of which group, which fought for women's right to vote in Britain?

Tuesday: Which food group, named after its founding family, produces brands such as "Milky Way" and "Bounty"?

Wednesday: Which Australian comedy star has appeared in films such as "Pitch Perfect" and "JoJo Rabbit"?

Thursday: Which cricket trophy is the subject of a regular battle between England and Australia?

Friday: Bone ash, feldspar and kaolin play are used to make what upmarket household product?

R-star

The term that economists use to describe the neutral real rate of interest, which applies when the economy is growing at its exact potential.

Read the full story.

It is better to fail in originality than to succeed in imitation.

Herman Melville