

The world in brief

Catch up quickly on the global stories that matter

Photograph: Getty Images

Andriy Yermak resigned as chief of staff to Ukraine's president, Volodymyr Zelensky, after anti-corruption agents raided his home. Mr Yermak had been leading Ukraine's peace negotiations with Russia. Mr Zelensky said he will shortly hold "consultations" to find a replacement. The corruption probe is reportedly part of a wider investigation that has toppled several officials close to the president.

Vladimir Putin said American proposals to end Russia's war in Ukraine could inform "future agreements". However, he insisted Ukraine would have to surrender territory in any deal. At a summit in Kyrgyzstan, Russia's president also rubbished suggestions that Steve Witkoff, Donald Trump's envoy, was showing Russia favour. Volodymyr Zelensky, Ukraine's president, said Mr Putin had "scorned" efforts for peace. Mr Witkoff will meet Mr Putin in Moscow next week.

Donald Trump said that one of the National Guard members shot near the White House on Wednesday had died. The other guardsman remained in hospital. John Ratcliffe, head of the CIA, said the suspected attacker, Rahmanullah Lakanwal, had worked with the spy agency in Afghanistan. Following the attack America's government stopped processing immigration requests from Afghans.

Rescue crews neared the end of their search of seven high-rise residential towers in Hong Kong that went up in flames on Wednesday. The death toll from the inferno rose to 128. Authorities said that styrofoam panels used during renovation work had allowed the blaze to spread. John Lee, Hong Kong's chief executive, also pledged to end the use of bamboo scaffolding.

Germany's EU-harmonised annual inflation rate for November hit 2.6%—higher than expected and an outlier when compared with its closest neighbours in the bloc. France's rate was unchanged, while Italy's and Spain's dipped. Inflation rose despite higher unemployment and less spending in shops. The European Central Bank is expected to hold interest rates unchanged at 2% at its next meeting in December.

Mark Carney, Canada's prime minister, announced a deal with the province of Alberta to build a 1,100km pipeline connecting the country's northern oil-producing region to the Pacific coast. The project will help Canada ship more oil to Asia and is part of the country's pivot away from America, where it currently sends most of its oil exports. Environmental groups condemned the plan.

Major General Horta Inta-a became Guinea-Bissau's interim president, a day after a military coup. The general said his forces had stepped in to save the country's democracy from a plot by “narco-traffickers”. He added that his government would be in place for a year. The African Union and the European Union condemned the putsch, which was the ninth in five years in west Africa.

Figure of the Day: 5,400, the number of foreign couples that got married in Copenhagen in 2024. Read the full story here.

Photograph: Reuters

Retailers brace for an unpredictable Black Friday

Black Friday, a post-Thanksgiving shopping fest, is here. Although retailers have been spreading out their discount offers (and many have already begun), they are banking on this weekend and Cyber Monday, a shopping event next week, to boost their revenues.

American consumers, however, are sending mixed signals. They say they are feeling dour, even as spending figures remain strong. The National Retail Federation expects retail sales in November and December to grow by up to 4.2% year on year. Yet tariffs, a shaky job market and slow wage growth for low-paid workers make it difficult to predict whether shoppers will spend with their usual seasonal zeal. Inflation is also a worry.

The divergence between spending and indicators of consumer sentiment, which normally move together, makes the direction of the American economy less certain. Even so, companies hope that markdowns entice cash-strapped Americans to shop away their anxiety.

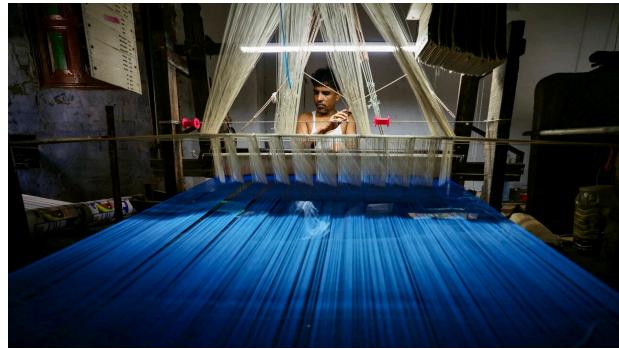

Photograph: AP

Hong Kong mourns after a devastating fire

On Wednesday a fire broke out in an apartment block in Hong Kong's Wang Fuk Court housing complex. It licked its way up 31 storeys before leaping to six surrounding buildings. Soon, nearly the entire complex was an inferno. By the next day 128 people were confirmed dead, including a firefighter, making the blaze one of the deadliest in Hong Kong since the second world war. Around 200 were still missing.

The cause of the fire is unknown. But officials said it began on a section of bamboo scaffolding. Police said some materials compromised fire-safety standards. On Thursday they arrested three members of the construction firm on suspicion of manslaughter.

The blaze is already drawing comparisons with one that killed 72 people at Grenfell Tower in London in 2017. Combustible cladding caused both fires to quicken. Each took place in a poor building within a rich city. A similar public outcry and political backlash will probably follow, too.

Photograph: Getty Images

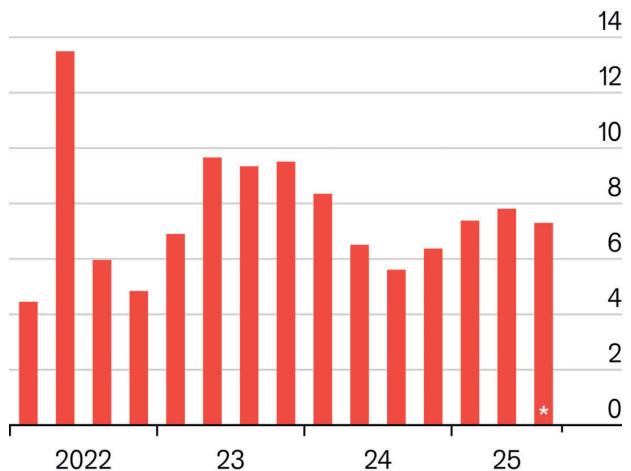

India's economy remains strong

India has had a testing year. In May it took part in a brief but alarming conflict with its neighbour, Pakistan. Since August it has been coping with extortionate American tariffs. Still, economic growth has been strong; GDP grew by 8.2% year on year between July and September. India is forecast to remain the world's fastest expanding major economy, with growth of 6.5% this financial year.

The size of India's economy makes it more resilient to external shocks. The stockmarket is booming and its balance of payments is strong. Inflation has been kept under control; the central bank looks likely to cut interest rates next month. Ordinary Indians lament the poor pace of job creation, but the government is pressing ahead with a major liberalisation of labour laws that will make India an easier place to do business. Meanwhile officials hope to conclude a trade deal with America, which would ease pressure on exporters. As the year draws to an end, Indians have reasons for cheer.

High note

India, GDP, % increase on a year earlier

Source: LSEG Workspace

*Estimate

Photograph: © Saab AB

Poland bulks up its navy

Keen to beef up its naval power, Poland is laying the groundwork for a major modernisation of its fleet. Its government announced on Wednesday it would purchase three A26 submarines from Saab, a Swedish aerospace and defence company, in a deal thought to be worth some $2.7bn. The submarines will not be surfacing in Polish harbours soon. The first is expected to be delivered around 2030.

The country's navy, which currently only has one operational submarine (and an old one at that), needs new ones to monitor and protect Poland's energy infrastructure in the Baltic Sea from hybrid or conventional attacks by Russia and its proxies. Among Poland's most important assets are a string of natural-gas terminals, pipelines and offshore wind farms, representing billions of dollars in investment. Recent damage to pipelines and cables on the Baltic seabed, suspected to be the work of the Russians, shows the threat lurking beneath the surface.

Photograph: John Wilson/Netflix

A laugh-a-minute murder mystery

A spookily remote setting: check. A seemingly impossible crime: check. A brilliant detective and an endearing sidekick: check. In “Wake Up Dead Man”, in cinemas now and streaming on Netflix on December 12th, Rian Johnson, the director, revels in the tropes of the murder-mystery formula. In this third instalment of the “Knives Out” franchise, Jud Duprencia, a hoodlum-turned-priest (played by Josh O’Connor) is sent to an isolated church in upstate New York. Its tyrannical overlord (Josh Brolin) is elaborately murdered. Jud is the prime suspect.

Enter Benoit Blanc (Daniel Craig), the nattily dressed investigator with a Southern drawl. At the heart of this delightful romp is the tension between reason and faith that has powered the genre since its 19th-century beginnings. But Mr Johnson, who lays on plenty of stars, laughs and twists, never forgets an unwritten rule of screen mysteries, namely: have fun!

Illustration: The Economist

Daily quiz

We will serve you a new question each weekday. On Friday your challenge is to give us all five answers and tell us the theme. Email your responses (and your home city and country) by 1700 GMT on Friday to [\[email protected\]](mailto:). We'll pick three winners at random and crown them on Saturday.

Friday: Which relay race in track cycling shares its name with one of America's founding fathers?

Thursday: Who starred as "Rick Grimes" in the long-running cable TV series "The Walking Dead"?

The road of denial leads to the precipice of destruction.

John Bunyan