

This page contains the following errors:

error on line 9 at column 638: redefinition of the xmlns prefix is forbidden

Below is a rendering of the page up to the first error.

The world in brief

June 16th 2026

World in Brief: Trump says Iran deal is “all signed”

Jun 16th 2026 (updated 1h ago)

Listen to this story

AI Narrated

Donald Trump said that a memorandum of understanding with Iran was “all signed” and that the Strait of Hormuz would be “completely open” by Friday, when a peace deal will be formalised. Details remain hazy, although many aspects are likely to be contentious. Negotiations over Iran’s nuclear programme will continue; sanctions relief may be contingent on their progress. Meanwhile America, Iran and Israel appear to disagree about what the pact means for Israel’s occupation of southern Lebanon.

Asian share prices rose for a second day, continuing a global stock-market rally set off by news of the deal. Europe’s STOXX 600 index hovered just above the all-time high at which it closed a day earlier. On Monday America’s S&P 500 index jumped by almost 1.7%, while the tech-heavy NASDAQ rose by more than 3%.

Chinese retail sales contracted by 0.6% year on year in May, their first drop since 2022. Investment in urban fixed assets, such as real estate and infrastructure, fell by 4.1% in the first five months of the year compared with the same period in 2025. Industrial manufacturing offered better news, rising by 4.5% compared with last April. Even so, China’s export-based growth model is looking increasingly shaky.

Leaders gathered for the G7 in France concluded a working session on Ukraine. When he arrived at the summit on Monday, Mr Trump expressed optimism that “maybe we can do something” about the war. Volodymyr Zelensky, Ukraine’s president, is also attending; he claimed to have proposed talks with Vladimir Putin but said that his Russian counterpart was “not ready”.

Nvidia is preparing its first bond sale since 2021. Reports suggest that the chipmaker wants to raise at least $20bn. Firms are racing to dominate the artificial-intelligence market. Amazon has also issued debt to cover its AI expenditure, while SpaceX raised \$75bn through an initial public offering last week; its shares then soared by nearly 20% in the first full day of trading on Monday.

Fox struck a $22bn deal to buy Roku, a streaming service with more than 100m users. The cable-TV giant wants to create a “next-generation media and technology company” to present its news and sport content as more viewers move online. The cash-and-stock deal is Fox’s first big acquisition since Lachlan Murdoch took over from his father, Rupert, last year.

A B-52 bomber crashed after taking off from Edwards Air Force Base in California, killing the eight people aboard. The Stratofortress was on a “routine test mission”, according to the base. Two of the dead were employees of Boeing, which manufactures the plane. It is the worst accident involving a B-52 since nine crew members died in a crash in 1982.

Figure of the day: 76%, the share of Brits who backed a social-media ban for kids in a YouGov poll in March. Read about how the policy, introduced on Monday, captures the British prime minister’s vanilla populism.

To make sense of the volatile world of business, finance and economics, sign up to our new weekday newsletter, Business in Brief.

Next →

US in brief: California scheming