Donald Trump said that a memorandum of understanding with Iran was “all signed” and that the Strait of Hormuz would be “completely open” by Friday, when a deal to end the war will be formalised. Details remain hazy, although many aspects are likely to be contentious. Negotiations over Iran’s nuclear programme will continue; sanctions relief may be contingent on their progress. Meanwhile America, Iran and Israel appear to disagree about what the pact means for Israel’s current occupation of southern Lebanon.

Asian stocks rallied for a second day as news of the deal drove share prices up around the world. On Monday America’s s&p 500 index jumped by almost 1.7%, while the tech-heavy Nasdaq rose by more than 3%. Earlier Europe’s STOXX 600 index of European firms hit an all-time opening record. Airline stocks took off as global oil prices dropped.

Chinese retail sales for May contracted by 0.6% year on year, their first drop since 2022. Urban fixed-asset investment, such as real estate and infrastructure, fell by 4.1% for the first five months of the year compared with the same period in 2025. Industrial manufacturing offered a silver lining, rising by 4.5% compared with last April. Even so, China’s export-based growth model is looking increasingly shaky.

Volodymyr Zelensky, Ukraine’s president, will meet leaders of G7 countries on Tuesday during their summit in France. Mr Trump expressed optimism that “maybe we can do something” about the Ukraine war as he arrived at the gathering on Monday. Mr Zelensky said that he also proposed talks with Vladimir Putin but that his Russian counterpart was “not ready”.

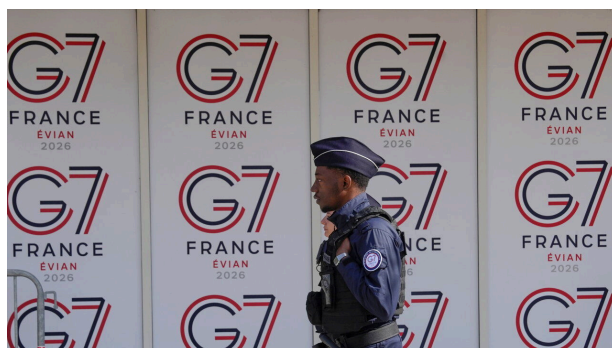

Nvidia is preparing its first bond sale since 2021. Reports suggest that the chipmaker wants to raise at least $20bn. Artificial-intelligence firms have been raising capital as the race to dominate the market intensifies. Amazon has also issued debt to cover its AI expenditure, while SpaceX raised \$75bn through an initial-public offering last week. Soon Anthropic and OpenAI will list too.

Fox struck a $22bn deal to buy Roku, a streaming service with more than 100m users. The cable-TV giant wants to create a “next-generation media and technology company” for its news and sport content as more viewers move online. The cash-and-stock deal is Fox’s first big acquisition since Lachlan Murdoch took over from his father, Rupert, last year.

A B-52 bomber crashed after taking off from Edwards Air Force Base in California, killing the eight people aboard. The Stratofortress was on a “routine test mission”, according to the base. Two of the dead were employees of Boeing, which manufactures the plane. It is the worst accident involving a B-52 since nine crew members died in a crash in 1982.
